ADJUSTING TO THE NEW NORMAL

Living with advanced gastrointestinal stromal tumor (GIST) is a major physical and emotional adjustment that takes time. There may be a lot of unknowns or changes that are hard to process.

COPING WITH PHYSICAL AND EMOTIONAL CHALLENGES

You are probably already very familiar with the physical effects and their treatment. The emotional burdens people sometimes have to deal with may be harder to recognize, though. Uncertainty, stress, anger, depression, guilt, grief, and fear are all common among people living with GIST.

Luckily, there are resources that may be able to help.

VOICES OF GIST

Voices of GIST is a place where you can find stories and videos of patients and care partners affected by GIST. Visit gistsupport.org and select “Voices of GIST” from the “About GSI” dropdown menu.

Every person’s story is unique. After you take a look around, consider sharing yours.

FINANCIAL HELP FOR PEOPLE WITH GIST

It's no secret: treating cancer can be expensive. But cost shouldn't be a barrier to receiving proper treatment. There are a number of resources available to help people with GIST afford their treatment.

FundFinder

A web app from the Patient Access Network Foundation that offers email or text notifications when financial help becomes available.

- Go to panfoundation.org and select “FundFinder” from the “Patients” dropdown menu

Patient Services Inc.

A non-profit foundation that provides financial support and guidance for qualified patients with specific, rare chronic diseases.

- Go to patientservicesinc.org

GIST Support International and The Life Raft Group

Both of these organizations can connect you with support options, from help with copays to travel assistance and lodging.

- Go to gistsupport.org and click on the “Financial Assistance” button
- Go to liferaftgroup.org and select “Financial Aid for GIST Patients” from the “Get Support” dropdown menu

The National Cancer Institute (NCI)

The NCI offers some smart insights into managing costs and medical information, including information on Medicare and Medicaid.

- Go to cancer.gov and select “Managing Costs and Medical Information” from the “About Cancer” dropdown menu

HELP YOUR LOVED ONES BE GREAT GIST CARE PARTNERS

At some point, everyone can use a hand. But no one wants to be a burden on the people they care about. Being clear about your needs to your loved ones can help them feel like they're being the best partners they can be. At the same time, remember that care partners have needs and deserve breaks too.

There are some excellent resources for care partners and family if you search for “caregiver” on the following websites:

- American Cancer Society
cancer.org
- Cancer.net
cancer.net
- Caregiver Action Network
caregiveraction.org
- Family Caregiver Alliance
caregiver.org
- National Cancer Institute
